Summer fun in the city

School's out and summer in the city can be a very stimulating time for families. So many events will be taking place around our wonderful five boroughs and in the surrounding metro area. This 4th of July will be no exception, and with them moving the fireworks to the East River, more boroughs will be able to view them than when they are on the west side, so enjoy!

Perhaps you're like me and have been caught up in World Cup fever. Our family is crazy for soccer and we've been rather glued to the games. It's so exciting to root for our national team and as I'm writing this they have been doing quite well in their group and are probably moving on to the next round. We are a "soccer" family and AYSO was a way of life for us for a number of years.

We're so glad to see it becoming more popular as more people get exposed to the game.

Whatever sport your children choose I hope they choose something. Complex and positive development is derived from participation in controlled and safe athletics. If your kids are enrolled in a summer program and/or camp they will undoubtedly be participating in lots of group activities and getting to know new friends and enjoying the many hours of daylight.

Still, it's also important for them to go on reading and stay on track with their intellectual and academic achievements. Summer reading lists are always a great idea and most schools have sent home a selection and parents should encourage and assist with this summer goal. The learning process must be ongoing and parental assistance is necessary sometimes to see that it does.

July is also a big time for family vacations and I'm certain that many families will be opting for some time out of the city or at one of our many fine beach areas. Make sure your kids use sun block and know water safety precautions. Make it a family habit because our kids mimic either what we do or what we don't.

So with the whole summer ahead and a city loaded with street fairs, parks, block parties, beaches, ball fields, theaters, and more, no one should have a reason to not be active and engaged.

I wish I had the summer "off" like our kids. I remember all too well the great feeling of freedom that we had in the summer break months and I recall it with wistful longing.

Whatever you do, I wish a great summer for you and your families. How terrific that it's just at the beginning and that many weeks still lie ahead. It goes fast though so make the most of it.

Thanks for reading and have a great time!

Connect with nature

A few weeks ago, I took my kids for a week-long vacation to the beautiful island of Jamaica. It still pains me a little to think about the hotel bill, but what we got from the experience was truly priceless.

The hotel was beautiful for sure — and the beach was really nice, too — but that's not the part of the trip I treasure most. What I really loved was watching my kids experience the life I had growing up there.

From mango trees to lizards crawling, nature is part of the daily life in Jamaica, and my kids got to experience some of it. They ventured into a bat cave, saw birds and fruit trees, and watched crabs crawl in and out of holes on the beach. One night after dinner we even stopped to watch a snail crawl for several feet, which, as you can imagine, took quiet a long time.

As a child, I didn't think much of these experiences. As an adult, I later realized how much they added to my life. I knew a little bit more about the world because I witnessed it first-hand. As a mom raising three kids in Manhattan, I think a great deal about those same experiences now.

Research shows that when kids come in contact with nature it reduces stress, stimulates their senses, enhances cognitive development, and improves their attention span. So this summer, in between camp and all the summer fun, give kids an opportunity to reconnect with Mother Earth in a meaningful way.

Here are five fun ways to enjoy nature this summer:

- Start an indoor garden. Your kids will enjoy watching the garden grow and marvel at the opportunity to incorporate it into dinner or a salad.

- Go fishing through Hudson River Park, where kids and adults can learn how to fish for free!

- Go berry picking. Summertime is berry-picking season, so take the little ones to a local farm to pick their very own strawberries!

- Head to the beach and collect stones and seashells, which the kiddies could later use for an art project.

- Have a picnic in the park and keep an eye out for bees and butterflies and talk to the little ones about how the flowers grow.

Kids in business

Children rake
in the skills when they get to work

BY DENISE YEARIAN

Children go into business for a variety of reasons. Some need extra cash to pay for recreational activities. Others have a desire to save for the future. Still others have a little extra time and want to make good use of it. Whatever the motivation, starting a summer business is a good way for children to learn entrepreneurial skills. Here are some things to consider:

Choose an idea

To get your child started in a business, help him make a list of what he likes to do and businesses that relate to those interests.

“When Ben decided he wanted to start a business, we sat down and talked about what he could do,” says his mother, Stephanie. “He has always loved animals, so it seemed a good fit for him to take care of other people’s pets.”

Once your child has made a list of what he enjoys doing and the kinds of services or products he can provide, have him analyze the market. Are there people who live in your area with specific needs? Talk with your child about those needs and how he may be able to provide a service or product for them. In Ben’s case, there were plenty of people in need of summer pet care. Also, look at small businesses in the community. Do any offer a similar service your child could provide at a lower cost?

Sole proprietor or joint venture

Many small businesses successfully run with one person. The key question to ask is, how much time does your child have to devote to the business? If he is on a swim team or involved in another sports program, his time may be limited. For this reason, your child may want to consider working with another family member or friend.

For the Andersons, this was the best way to go. Their oldest child, Brandon, had karate lessons several times a week and a few summer tournaments on the calendar.

“While Brandon was at lessons, the girls and I mixed and baked cookies, so they would be ready to sell the next day,” reports their mother Kim.

The upside to having a joint venture is less work for each individual and more potential for the business to grow. The down side is they have to split the profits, and one party may feel he or she is doing more work than the other.

“There were times the girls complained that their brother didn’t help with the mixing and baking,” Kim says. “But I reminded them their brother was the one in charge of advertising. And he was always there when it came time to sell.”

Advertising ideas

Before advertising, choose a name that fits. Some business names are cute and clever. Others have names that clearly state who is running the business and what it offers — Ben’s Best Home Pet Care. With a little creativity, your child can come up with a name that’s cute, clever, and states its purpose.

The best place to begin advertising is with family, friends, and neighbors.

“One thing that made Ben’s business so successful was we lived in the same community for 10 years,” says Stephanie. “People knew our whole family and felt comfortable letting Ben take care of their pet.”

One of the cheapest and most effective ways to advertise is to print up flyers and pass them around the neighborhood or community. Flyers should be printed on bright paper and include the business name, child’s name, phone number, address, services or products offered, and price (if desired). Posters that are tacked on bulletin boards are another good option, especially if they have tear-and-take tabs on the bottom of the poster that lists the service provided and a contact number. Other advertising options include business cards, newspaper ads, phone calls, and emails.

Count the cost

Before your child delves into business, have him list all of the supplies needed and the cost of each item. If he has money in his savings account, he can use that to get the business up and running. If not, perhaps you can loan it to him with the agreement he pay it back. That’s what the Andersons did.

“When my kids started Yum Yums, they were pretty broke,” Kim states. “I told them I would pay for the initial supplies, and they could reimburse me as the business took off.” Another option? Have your child do extra chores around the house to raise money for start up.

Business ideas for kids

Short on business ideas? Here’s a few:

- Babysitting
- Birthday party helper or entertainer
- Tutoring
- Data entry
- Dog walking
- Pet care
- Refreshment stand
- Baking
- Produce stand
- Garden weeding
- Lawn mowing
- Car washing
- Personalized people and pet gifts
- T-shirt making
- Making care packages
- Jewelry making or other craft

Determine the price

The flip side to counting the cost is determining the price. If your child is making a product, such as Yum Yum Cookies, go to a place where similar products are being sold. In the Andersons' case, a local bakery. What are similar products selling for? How much can your child reasonably charge after paying for supplies and still realize a profit?

If your child is providing a service, find out what his competitors are charging for the same services. Do they charge by the job or the hour? What are kids his age earning for doing similar work? One key question your child should ask himself is, "Can I offer this product or service for a little lower than market rate and still make a profit?" If the answer is "yes," he's in business!

Policies and practices

Before embarking on the business, have your child determine exactly what services or products he will offer. This should then be communicated to future customers. If, for example, your child starts a lawn mowing business, will he provide his own gas? Sweep the driveway? Rake, if necessary? Depending on the business, he may want to have a written description of what he provides. When the service has been completed, your child should give the customer a receipt and make a duplicate copy for himself.

Even though your child is young, he can earn the respect of customers by maintaining good work ethics. Impress on him the need to be on time, respectful, and hard working. This is also a good way to help the business grow. Remind him that current customers may pass along his name to potential new customers.

At the onset of your child's business, establish safety rules. Insist that he inform you of his whereabouts at all times. Avoid letting him sell door-to-door. Stress the importance of not talking with strangers while he is alone. Remind your child that if he ever feels uncomfortable, leave the situation and find a trusted adult immediately. If you have an extra cellphone or one he can borrow, let him take it while he is gone.

Record his success

Being a successful entrepreneur means managing money wisely. Encourage your child to record his income, expenses, and profit by making a chart in a notebook or using a ledger. This will show him how much money he has put into the business and how much he has gleaned from it. Allow your child to spend some of his earnings, but encourage him to save some and put some back into the business. If he has borrowed money from you, he needs to pay you back. This is also a good time to teach your child about benevolent giving. Is there an organization he can give to?

Once kids experience the accomplishment of working, earning, and spending, they may decide to keep going. That's what Ben did.

"He had so much fun taking care of other people's animals, he kept the business going for several years," concludes Stephanie.

For the Andersons, Yum Yums was a summer experience that was shelved when school started.

"By the time fall rolled around, my kids were ready to shift gears," Kim finishes. "That's okay, though. It was a great experience, and I'm glad they did it. My kids worked together for a common goal and learned a little about what it takes to run a business."

Got their 'Back'

Operation Backpack helps a child in need face school with a smile

BY SHAVANA ABRUZZO

Summer is finally here, but the start of a new school year is around the corner.

The pint-sized pupils in your life may already be bugging you about buying pens, pencils, notebooks, binders, bookbags and all the other supplies that make their fresh start fun, so turn the nag into a flag of opportunity for good works and introduce them to Operation Backpack.

The annual campaign of Volunteers of America-Greater New York collects brand-new knapsacks filled with grade-specific supplies for the thousands of city children living in homeless and domestic violence shelters, and then delivers them to their doorsteps before the first day of school.

You and your family can help by dropping off new backpacks and supplies at a Duane Reade store near you from July 14 through Aug. 8. You can also donate at the register from July 13 to 24 to help the retailer continue its assistance to vulnerable youth.

Operation Backpack instills community service in children while defraying costs for families in need, claims the program's founder.

"A new backpack and school supplies can make the difference between a child being excited to go to school and not wanting to go at all," says Rachel Weinstein. "With the average cost of a filled backpack hovering around $81, we can relieve the financial burden that many parents face."

A humble backpack can amount to a badge of honor for underprivileged children: It can help restore normalcy to their otherwise chaotic lives, make them look and feel more like their classmates, and help them start the school year prepared and confident in the knowledge that their education is important and that someone believes in them.

It can also be a fun and fulfilling summer activity for your whole family — the rewards of which are in a class of their own.

Visit www.OperationBackpackNYC.org/fill for a grade-specific supply list. Companies and community groups interested in donating can contact Rachel Weinstein at rweinstein@voa-gny.org.

Avoiding the summer slide

Boredom busters for all age groups

BY CHRISTINA KATZ

You have probably heard about the summer slide — the way kids can lose a lot of the skills, knowledge, and motivation they learned during the school year over the lazy, hazy days of summer. And though I am sure you don't need your child to become the next Einstein or Madame Curie, you probably want to make sure your child will retain all that was learned last year in order to be prepared for the academic year to come.

And sure, a little strategic screen time here and there can be educational when we intend it that way, but the key to keeping summer fun and instructive is to mix up informative play and educational screen time. This is also a great way to stave off the inevitable choruses of "I'm bored" or "We're bored."

This summer, set tone that a little learning is an important part of each day, so kids still enjoy the relaxation of summer while keeping up the habit of learning.

Here is a roundup of 21 ways to keep your kids' minds active all summer long, so your kids will have a happier summer and you won't worry about the transition back to school come fall:

Ask for insight. Check with your child's teacher before school gets out to see what kinds of educational goals she recommends for your child. Don't compare your children's academic performance to siblings or friends. Everyone learns and grows differently. Aim to support your child wherever he stands academically right now to maximize enjoyment of learning.

Sign up for your library summer reading program. Set a minimum reading time each day of 30 to 60 minutes. Or break reading time into two 30-minute chunks — one for a parent-approved book and the other for whatever your child chooses to read. The library offers lots of variety, and summer is a great time to check out age-appropriate comic books and graphic novels, as well as cookbooks and biographies.

Visit museums in your area. Find out in advance when the free days are to visit local museums and learning centers. Opt for guided or non-guided tour, as your family prefers. Be sure to check out the gift shop on your way out for inspired games and toys.

Plant a garden together. Use illustrated gardening books by Sharon Lovejoy to find projects that suit the personalities of your family and kids. If your family loves pizza, plant a pizza garden. If fresh salsa is your thing, plant a salsa garden. Think about what your family likes to eat and plant accordingly. See sidebar for guidebooks bursting with gardening inspiration.

Shop like a teacher. Visit your local teacher supply store and stock up on workbooks and educational games. Other things you will find that might motivate summer loungers include timers for breaking the day up into learning chunks, craft supplies for every age, and educational games, videos, and music.

Play store. Pull out a portion of the food in your cabinets and pantry out onto the countertops. Let kids use real money, price items, break out the calculators, and do the math. Make playing store an all-day affair or a weekly occurrence, if your kids enjoy it. Make the game as simple or complex as suits your children's ages.

Visit local nature centers, Audubon societies, and nearby gardens. Make a list at the beginning of summer and plan to hit all the regional natural destinations all before the first day of school. Then plan a weekly outing and bring along a picnic. To review what you saw and learned on the way home, play "I Spied" instead of "I Spy."

Research a future vacation. Let each child pick his own destination and figure out what it would cost for the family to spend one week there including airfare, transportation, meals, hotels, and everything else. Have them present their proposed vacations to the whole family by showing the math writ large on posterboard. Who knows, they just might talk you into a trip you hadn't thought of yourself.

Let them plan a meal. The kids can become chefs for the day, including the jobs of finding the recipes, making the grocery list, cutting the coupons, doing the shopping, comparing brands, and cooking up a storm. Then be a good sport and enjoy whatever they serve. Very young children can do the same, only with make-pretend food.

Have a word of the day. Put the word in large letters at the top of a page with the definition just below. Hang the word on the fridge and make a game out of using it in sentences all day long.

Battle bugs or weeds as research projects. What a great way to practice troubleshooting and potentially solve your most nagging nuisances. Challenge older kids to solve your ecological challenges by researching and experimenting with natural solutions they track down on the Internet. Keep a log of the results. Give rewards for problems solved.

Measure and mix. Put the kids in charge of desserts for the summer. Make sure they create some healthy choices like fruit pops or sorbet, as well as delicious baked goodies like pies, cakes, and cookies. If they get carried away, let them have a neighborhood bake sale.

Go multi-media with books you read together. Take turns reading out loud or check out audio books from your local library to listen to before dinner or before bed. Once you finish the book as a family, watch the movie together. Compare and contrast the books and the films. See sidebar for suggested books that have been made into movies.

Keep a "How I Spent My Summer Scrapbook." Choose a blank-page, over-sized book with ample pages for writing, collaging, collecting, and embellishing. Set aside time to work on "summer books" for a half hour every day at whatever time of day works best. Let kids decide whether or not to keep it private or share the results with the family.

Sign up for BrainPop. This educational website has more than 1,000 short animated movies for kids ages 6 to 17, making it the perfect substitute teacher for your kids over the summer. Best of all, they can pursue topics that interest them. Check with your child's school library to see if they have free access to BrainPopJr for kindergarten through third grade. Otherwise, a subscription is money well spent on entertaining enrichment.

Tackle a big creative project. Choose one that takes planning, creativity, and involving others like putting on a puppet show, writing a play, or making a movie. Let your child approach the project in his own way, and only offer to help if you are needed. Invest a little money in your child's creativity and their imaginations will be buoyed by your patronage.

Visit friends and family around the world. Start with a list of friends and family you know all over the globe. Then once a week, take an hour to really explore that destination via Google Earth and by researching online information. Expand your geographic horizons further by video-calling your friends or family and informally interviewing them about the area where they live. Post a map on the wall and stick a tack in each location you visit virtually.

Think beyond the lemonade stand. Terrific lessons about business, sales, and marketing will be learned when you create your child's version of the lemonade stand. Why not sell old toys, baked goods, or artwork as a lesson in entrepreneurship? You never know. You might spark a future interest in business.

Commit to a cause. If your child loves animals, see if you can spend some time volunteering at a local animal shelter. If she's a regular fashionista, why not throw a summer "trashion" show to raise money for a local charity? Even a trip to your local food bank or letting your kids come with you while you give blood is a life lesson that keeps on giving.

Share your childhood favorites. Did you love to make friendship bracelets or collect comic books? Did your husband learn to play guitar or practice scouting skills in the backyard? Summer is the perfect time to share your favorite hobbies and summer pastimes with your kids. Why not strike up a conversation about it at dinner tonight to get the memories rolling?

Admire intelligence. Find healthy and smart virtual role models for your tween or teen to study over the summer. For example, if your young lady loves entropy and dissecting frogs, she might enjoy trying some home experiments created by Bill Nye, the "Science Guy." Learn more at <http://www.billnye.com/for-kids-teachers/home-demos/>. Make a list of virtual summer tutors for each child and indulge in customized summer learning.

Baby, I'm tired

Helping your baby sleep
all night

BY MALIA JACOBSON

There's no denying that parenting is exhausting work. But having a baby doesn't have to mean resigning yourself to months (and years) of sleepless nights. Armed with a bit of expert knowledge, you can help your little one sleep better — so you can catch a few zzzzs, too.

Find your baby's sleep number

According to sleep expert Dr.

Jacob Teitelbaum, late bedtimes cause many childhood sleep problems, because overtiredness makes it harder for children to get to sleep and stay asleep. But figuring out when to put your baby to bed can be tough.

To find your baby's perfect bedtime, first determine how many hours of sleep he needs in a 24-hour period to determine how many hours he can comfortably stay awake per day. Set your child's bedtime so that he is not awake longer than that, and you'll prevent overtiredness that can wreck nighttime sleep.

For example, a 10-month-old who needs 14 hours of daily sleep can stay awake for 10 hours per day. If he gets up at 6 am and naps for three hours each day, he needs a standing 7 pm date with his bed. (Hint: Newborns need between 14 and 16 hours of shut-eye per day; tots 1 to 3 years old need 12 to 14 hours, and kids 3 to 6 need 10 to 12 hours.)

Nix the nightlight

You may love the way your baby's smile lights up a room, but when it comes to sleep, the best light is no light at all. Nighttime light disrupts melatonin production, and even a small nightlight or the light from the baby monitor can be enough to prevent deep, restful sleep. Dim the house lights after dinner and install effective blackout blinds to get the bedroom truly dark. A black twin-sized flat sheet can be folded in half and tacked around a window in a pinch.

Learning to fall asleep in bed will help your child learn to sleep longer stretches, and eventually, sleep through the night. But many babies won't tolerate being put down awake.

Embrace boring

Sleep doctors agree that an effective bedtime routine is one that's absolutely set in stone: the same things, in the same order, every night.

"Our bodies love routine, and this is especially so with children and bedtime," says Teitelbaum. Performing the same events in the same sequence before bed cues a child's subconscious for sleep. Sure, a routine this solid is bound to get boring for you. But the routine is for their sake, not yours (and a happily snoozing child is well-worth the effort).

Practice the pacifier

Pediatrics reports that nearly 70 percent of parents give pacifiers to their newborns. And it's likely that a good portion of these parents find themselves getting up at night to replug their baby's lost binky. The sooner a child learns to manage his or her own pacifier, the better everyone sleeps. Incorporate "paci practice" into tummy time and playtime, and your baby will be self-plugging in no time.

Start sunny side up

For an easier bedtime, start your baby's day off the bright way. Strong morning light helps set your child's internal clock so he'll fall asleep more easily come nightfall. Open curtains to let the light shine in, and serve breakfast in a sunny spot. When weather permits, take a quick stroll around the block.

Atta baby

Many experts advise putting babies to bed drowsy but awake, to support independent sleep skills. It's true, learning to fall asleep in bed will help your child learn to sleep longer stretches, and eventually, sleep through the night. But many babies won't tolerate being put down awake.

Help your baby learn to love his crib by using rhythmic patting to soothe him after placing him in bed, without picking him back up. Because infants should be placed to sleep face-up, you might not be able to pat your child's back, so pat the crib mattress or the shoulder instead.

Avoid nap traps

Naps are important to babies and young children — they promote healthy nighttime rest, and new research from Emory University shows that they help babies learn and retain new information. But napping all day is guaranteed to make your baby nocturnal; research links more daytime sleep with less sleep at night.

To promote healthy naps while preserving nighttime sleep, don't allow naps longer than three hours. For most babies and young children, naps of an hour or two are long enough to be restorative without robbing nighttime sleep.

Get baby moving

Moving all day can help your baby sleep all night. A body in motion is one that's primed for sleep, because exercise helps children fall asleep faster and sleep more soundly. So put away your stroller and carrier and let your little one move. Aim for at least 60 minutes per day of vigorous activity. Toddlers and young children need plenty of chances to walk and run; babies need lots of time on their tummies and backs to wiggle, stretch, and work their muscles.

Summer reading on an e-reader

Summertime and the reading is easy
with e-books

BY SUE LEBRETON

As temperatures rise and the days lengthen, are you dreaming about lazy, summer days, lounging on the beach or relaxing in a hammock reading a great summer book? How about your children, do they read throughout the summer or take a vacation from books?

Summer reading helps children maintain the academic progress they achieved in the school year. It is also a great time to encourage kids to read for fun. Research shows that they are more likely to read a book that they choose. So have them pick an interesting book and then suggest making it an e-book to change their summer reading into a new and exciting experience.

Just as they embrace all the new technology, children are quickly adopting this form of book reading. According to the Scholastic Kids and Family Reading Report, the percentage of children who have read an e-book has almost doubled in the past three years, rising to 46 percent, and they say they are keen to read more. Almost half of the children aged 6 to 17 told the researchers that they would read more books for fun if they had greater access to e-books. More books for fun? That is music to a parent's ears.

The Scholastic data also showed that 25 percent of boys who had read an e-book were now reading more books for fun. That is fantastic news for a group who tends to read less as they age. E-books could be a boon to your efforts to keep your boy reading regularly for pleasure.

What if your child is a reluctant reader? This is a group that can benefit from e-books because they are often intimidated by larger books and the appearance of a text-heavy page. E-books are read on slim devices that display a single page and offer the option to increase the type size. My 11-year-old son loves that the e-reader tracks his progress. Like the children in the study, he is motivated to see the percentage read increase on the screen instead of being discouraged by seeing the volume of a print book that remains to be read despite expending considerable time reading.

Two e-book attributes children say they like are portability and privacy. The ability to carry multiple books offers the opportunity to move to the next book when they complete one, or switch books if the current one loses their interest. What a great tool to have when traveling. Children commented in the study that they were also fond of the fact that with e-books they can hide what they are reading from friends. Admit it, sometimes we all read things we might not want our friends to see.

Are your eyes glazing over at the thought of introducing yet another

More about e-readers

The experience that most closely mimics reading a print book is using one of the e-readers with black and white e-ink pages. The market is dominated by Sony, Kobo and Kindle devices. They range from the base models (about $69) that require you to download books from a seller's site while hooked to your home computer, to newer wi-fi and touch-screen models that allow you to buy books on the go (up to $199). Be careful, this is a convenient but potentially budget-stretching option for an avid book buyer.

These are dedicated book devices, so no surfing the web or checking e-mails. E-books are slightly cheaper to purchase than print books, so depending upon your reading and purchasing pace the e-reader can pay for itself fairly quickly. Remember, no late fees at the library. The lack of distraction from e-mail and the lure of web surfing can also be helpful for readers who are easily seduced to other media.

Buying an e-reader

Before you head to the store, go to your library's website so that you know what format they support, otherwise, you might end up with a device where purchasing books is your only option. Talk to friends who have e-readers and do some online research for comparisons. Define what is important to you as a reader. Do you need a dictionary? Do you need wi-fi? Once you are clear about what you need, go to a store and handle the various devices to see which you prefer. Remember to ask where you can buy books that are compatible with this specific reader.

Other devices

You can read an e-book on your laptop, computer, iPad or tablet, iPod, cellphone and Play Station Portable or the Nintendo DS. The PlayStation and Nintendo options are more cumbersome to turn into readers, but it can be done, and instructions are available online.

To use an existing device to read an e-book, download an app so that you can read your books, magazines, and newspapers anywhere. Just be sure that the app is compatible with the source where you purchased the original material. For example, if you buy books from Kobo for your Kobo reader, you need the Kobo app to be able to read that same material on your other devices. There are some conversion software options available if you purchase from multiple sources, but if you go that route, you will need to be more comfortable playing with the technology.

Some e-reader producers have entered into the tablet market so that users can surf the internet and check e-mails in addition to reading e-books. These devices range from $200 up to $600 for their multiple offerings.

Top
Tips

pricey device into your home and budget? E-reading does not have to break the bank. There is an e-reader option to suit most budgets, and you can borrow books from the library without ever leaving your home. Some libraries even loan the devices. The best part about borrowing e-books from your library? No late fees. Once your borrowing period expires, the file is no longer accessible on your device. The first time you borrow an e-book you have to download the required software but the process is relatively simple.

You can begin e-reading today without an outlay of cash if you use technology that you may already own, such as a cellphone, iPod, iPad, tablet, laptop, or computer. Download an e-book app and you can begin to buy or borrow books. Take note that for summer reading on the beach or deck, many of these backlit devices do not perform well in direct sunlight due to the glare, but an e-reader is fine.

Despite its many merits, e-reading is not likely to replace print books for all uses. Nothing surpasses the joy of snuggling and reading to your child at bedtime, no matter what their age. Children in the study echoed that sentiment and said they still preferred a paper book at bedtime. That is probably a wise choice, since exposure to lit devices can delay the onset of sleep, not at all what we parents are looking for at bedtime.

Sue LeBreton is a health and wellness journalist and an avid reader. Thanks to her e-reader, she carries a library with her wherever she goes.

With thirty eight years of academic excellence, uniquely applied in our attentive and charming Montessori environments, we provide your children with the most joyous experience of learning.

the corner of Tompkins Square Park, SBS provides its students from Pre-K through 8th grade with a safe and welcoming learning environment, where every child is given the opportunity to reach his/her potential and become critical thinkers and impassioned members of the community. Our Early Childhood Program accepts children aged 3 and 4 with student-teacher ratios maxed at 9:1.

The Pre-K curriculum focuses on literacy, math, values, and classroom preparation. Center based instruction at St. Brigid School fosters the important early development of math and literacy that is supported by continual feedback and exchanges with the teacher. Through play in areas like the block center, art center, and the sand table, learning is thus both communicative and explorative and builds a strong foundation for critical thought.

Ludwig Bemelmans's painting of Madeline at the Paris Flower Market.

75 years of 'Madeline'

New York is a great place to celebrate this story of Paris

BY TAMMY SCILEPPI

It all started in 1939, with a humorous, rhyming picture book about a petite Parisian school-girl. She's a mischievous red-head with spunk and attitude, who becomes the envy of her classmates when her appendix is removed (true story).

Madeline is the feistiest of 12 little girls in two straight lines, wearing identical coats and flat sailor chapeaux. A brave role model for her young female readers, she seems totally fearless when telling a tiger in the zoo, "pooh, pooh!" — proving that being smart and strong is cool, even if you're a mademoiselle.

Since her whimsical debut 75 years ago, Madeline still remains one of the world's most popular and beloved fictional characters. And, through her whirlwind escapades in Paris, London, and the French countryside — brought to life by her creator Ludwig Bemelmans's enchanting watercolor illustrations and light-hearted storytelling — she has charmed her way from the original book through all five sequels, which have become true classics.

You can probably find at least one "Madeline" storybook on every kid's bookshelf.

Who was Bemelmans?

A hundred years ago, a footloose, frustrated, misfit teen from Austria arrived in New York City. Needing a creative outlet, he began to draw on walls — of his apartment, in restaurants — everywhere. Starting his first career as a busboy at the Ritz Hotel, he taught himself how to sketch on the backs of menus and kitchen tile walls.

“His ambition was to be a cartoonist, until the brilliant children’s book editor at Viking discovered him, and said, ‘You must write children’s books!’” says exhibit curator, Jane Curley.

The first lines of “Madeline” were written on the back of a menu at Pete’s Tavern in Manhattan.

Bemelmans claimed to have no imagination; all his books are mostly based on his experiences and people he knew. Madeline herself was actually a mix of personalities: his daughter, Barbara; his wife, Madeleine; and his mother. The schoolgirl was also her creator’s alter ego, along with her favorite companion, Pepito, who expressed Bemelmans’s wild and naughty side as a child.

Like Madeline, Bemelmans was a free spirit; he liked living large.

“His circle of friends ranged from mobsters to millionaires. He loved commissions like this one, where he got to stay on board a luxurious yacht, just as he stayed rent-free at the Carlyle, while he painted the murals at the bar there,” said Curley.

And he loved to travel.

“For ‘Madeline and the Bad Hat,’ he visited Spain; for ‘Madeline and the Gypsies,’ he followed Gypsy caravans and circuses around for an entire summer in 1958. Of course, it was fun for him!” explains Curley.

And his message — which runs through all the Madeline books — is one of “courage, optimism, and delight in life, even in the face of challenges,” says Curley.

The “Madeline” series includes “Madeline,” 1939; “Madeline’s Rescue,” 1953; “Madeline and the Bad Hat,” 1956; “Madeline and the Gypsies,” 1959; “Madeline in London,” 1961. Bemelmans’s grandson has continued the series with books written and illustrated in his grandfather’s style: “Madeline and the Cats of Rome,” “Madeline at the White House,” and “Madeline and the Old House in Paris.”

Bemelmans bar

At the upper-crust Carlyle Hotel on the Upper East Side, in the 1940s, Bemelmans was commissioned to paint murals in exchange for room and board. In fact, if you visit the hotel’s swanky Bemelmans Bar, you can enjoy a cocktail surrounded by his whimsical illustrations of city landmarks.

For youngsters who want to feel like they’re part of “Madeline” and love music and dressing up fancy, Bemelmans Bar serves high tea and kid-friendly food from Saturdays through October before Christmas. Singer and pianist Tina de Varon even takes singing requests and makes it a truly unique family experience.

Madeline’s Tea at the Carlyle [35 E. 76th St. at Madison Avenue on the Upper East Side, (212) 744-1600, www.rosewoodhotels.com/en/the-carlyle-new-york/dining/bemelmans-bar].

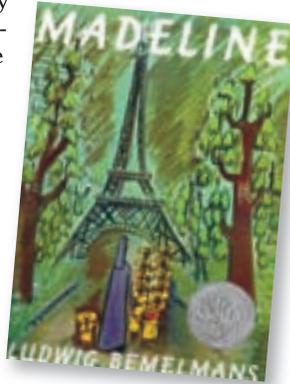

Anniversary celebration

To celebrate the 75th anniversary, the New-York Historical Society on Manhattan’s Upper West Side is honoring the little darling of Paris and her creator with a special exhibit and family event from July 4 to Oct. 13 — featuring more than 90 original artworks by Bemelmans, as well as the weekly Madeline’s Tea Party on Wednesdays.

To commemorate the anniversary, a lavish slipcased edition of the original book can be viewed or purchased at the New-York Historical Society. It includes a full-color panoramic pop-up spread of Paris, with all the famous landmarks, including Madeline’s house.

New horizons

Traveling abroad with children

BY DENISE YEARIAN

Parents who want to broaden their children's horizons should consider international travel. Taking children abroad gives them an opportunity to experience other cultures, customs, histories, and heritages. To make the most of your family's overseas endeavor, choose a destination with activities that will engage both children and adults.

This is what Yvonne Tomassetti did when considering a vacation to the United Kingdom with her 9-year-old son.

"Justin and I like to go to renaissance fairs and he has always wanted to see real castles. He's also interested in bagpipes," she says. "So I found a group castle tour that took us from Buckingham Palace to Edinburgh Castle and a lot of places in between. I knew there would be a good deal of walking but he was old enough to enjoy it without getting too tired."

Brenda Hunsberger, director of travel programs for AAA thinks it's a good idea to plan the itinerary with your child's age and interest in mind.

"Consider the activities from his perspective," she says. "Ask yourself, 'Will he enjoy this?' 'Will it keep his interest?' 'Will it be too physically taxing on him?' Then plan accordingly."

Prioritize what you most want to see, but avoid over-scheduling. Balance structured time with unstructured activities, such as playing at a park, shopping for souvenirs, or enjoying a local treat. These are ways children can connect with the culture on their level and ease into the environment. Martha Benintende found this to be true.

"When we first arrived in Italy, we rented a car and stayed on a farming estate in Tuscany for the first five days," says the mother of two, John Patrick, 7, and Quinn, 10. "We spent a lot of mornings just walking around the farm while the kids played with the animals there. In the afternoons, we'd take short day trips to nearby ancient hill towns to grab a bite to eat and

What to know before you go

A list of helpful tips to think about before jetting off to your foreign destination.

Time it right. Plan travels abroad to be 10 or more days. This includes two days en route.

Put it in perspective. Establish trip priorities and evaluate them based on your child's age, personality, and interests. Look at the sites from his perspective. Focus on places your child has heard about and wants to see.

Mix things up. Don't over-plan or sightsee all day, everyday. Mix structured activities with free time for your child to play at the park, shop, or swim at your hotel. The hotel concierge can direct you to local family-friendly places.

Get a guide or map it out. When considering a tour, get a guide to make it more interesting. Expect that certain parts of the tour won't be fun, so bring snacks, toys, and books to keep your child occupied. If you opt out of a tour, get a map of the museum or site in advance to highlight those items you want to see, so you can get in and out if need be.

At-home primers. Help your child prepare in advance. Look at globes and maps to get a distance perspective. Read child-friendly travel books and fiction titles set in the destination, watch related movies and television shows, and view virtual tours of sites online. Teach your child a few basic words from the given language. Ask his teacher if there is an upcoming unit on your destination to help your child prepare.

Journal events. Purchase a journal for your child to take along. Have him record not only what he saw, but also personal impressions. Purchase a camera so he can take pictures and create a photo album or scrapbook.

Travel entertainment. Before flying, find out what kind of entertainment is on the plane. Buy a portable DVD player; bring favorite books, toys, games, and snacks; and wrap up small gifts for the flight. Lay out expectations for your child in advance so he knows there will be a designated time for playing, watching TV, amenities your family may enjoy. Ask about equipment on location, so you don't have to bring extra items along. When traveling with young children, choose one accommodation that is close to all the sites you want to see. This avoids having to juggle infant belongings from one place to another.

Culinary adjustments. In many foreign countries dinner starts at a later time. Also, different foods may not be palatable to your child. Bring along familiar snacks and foods, but encourage your child to try new things.

Take on transportation. Use public transportation in larger cities. Hop-on, hop-off buses allow you to stop at sites you want to see. In many parts of the world, trains are far reaching and a great way to travel distances. If you are going outside the city, weigh the option of renting a car with your comfort level of driving.

Prepare for emergencies. Most touristy locations have medical facilities with English-speaking doctors, but check your insurance policy before you go. Most policies, even good ones, don't cover medical in foreign countries. If yours doesn't, get travel insurance that covers medical.

reading, eating, and sleeping.

Adjust to jet lag. Ease the discomfort of jet lag by staying awake the first day as long as you can. Leave that day open and flexible.

Find the right accommodations. Many hotels in historic districts are small with twin- instead of double-sized beds. E-mail the hotel manager in advance and ask about bed and room sizes. Consider connecting rooms to give your family more space. Resorts may offer more room space with explore the area. It was a great way to deal with jet lag and ease into our trip.”

Once the Benintendes were acclimated to their new environment, they traded a life of leisure for downtown sites of Florence, Venice, and Rome. But not before considering what they wanted to see and who would show them around.

“Because we were traveling with my 75-year-old mother, I thought private tours would be the best way to see what we wanted to see and have it geared toward my children’s interests but paced at my mother’s needs,” she says.

Getting a tour guide is one of the most important things parents of school-age children can do when traveling abroad, say Amie O’Shaughnessy, travel expert and founder of the online family travel agency Ciao Bambino.

“The guides know how to tailor the content for kids to make it interesting and fun.”

You don’t have to go with a private guide, either. Group tours may be just as engaging for children.

“When we went to Edinburgh Castle, there was a lot of walking, but the tour was still geared for kids,” say Tomassetti. “In a couple of rooms there were swords and re-enactors were acting things out. Justin really liked that.”

But what really helps children enjoy the sites is to acquaint them with information in advance.

“Get a child-friendly guidebook while you are still planning the trip and point out fun facts and things to see,” says Hunsberger. “If you can find virtual tours online, do that.”

“Maps and globes are good primers too,” says O’Shaughnessy. “This will give your child a perspective of where he is going in relation to where you live. Another fun activity is to teach your child a couple of basic words such as ‘hello,’ ‘please’ and ‘thank you.’”

Benintende did this.

“We bought an Italian dictionary and the kids learned a few words. Almost everywhere we went the people spoke English, but my kids still said a lot of ‘ciao’ and ‘grazie’ and tried to order the food themselves. Their pronunciation wasn’t the best, but they had fun,” she says.

Benintende also purchased journals so her children could record thoughts about the trip.

“While we were in Tuscany, the kids would sit down every night and we would talk about our day, then they would start writing. It was their way to unwind,” she says.

Justin kept a record, too.

“He took a lot of pictures with his camera and picked up brochures,” says Tomassetti. “When he got home we integrated them into a photo album-scrapbook. Then he took it, along with some coins and souvenirs, and shared it with his class.”

Both families brought back mementos from their respective countries, but it was the day-to-day encounters that left an indelible impression.

“Our trip to Italy has opened my kids’ minds to things they had never really thought about before — art, history, geography, religion, and politics — and certainly not in this broad of a perspective,” says Benintende. “I think they’ve always had a sense that the world is bigger than where we live, but seeing is believing. Now they know it’s the real deal.”

Food label accuracy

You felt so proud of yourself. You consumed only half of one of those stubby cartons of premium ice cream — until you noticed with horror that a serving size is only half a cup and not the entire carton. Oops.

Let's face it, the nutrition facts panel that has been a part of our food packages for two decades is confusing and frustrating. But if the Food and Drug Administration gets its way, labels will soon be revamped.

Americans have mixed feelings when it comes to how helpful food labels are to them. According to a Harris Poll of 2,266 adults surveyed in February:

- They are divided on whether seeing “healthy” on a food package is a helpful nutrition indicator, with 53 percent feeling it’s helpful and 47 percent indicating it’s not.

Fact: This claim is strictly regulated, with specific limits on its fat, saturated fat, cholesterol and sodium content, plus a requirement for certain good nutrients.

- Three out of four (76 percent) feel that the statement “Made with...” — as in “Made with real fruit” — is a helpful signpost.

Fact: These labels can be applied to anything that contains even very small amounts of the boasted content.

New labels, new emphases

Calorie counts would be in large type and portion sizes will be adjusted to reflect how much Americans really eat. For example, a 20-ounce bottle of soda would be counted as one serving, rather than the two-and-a-half servings currently seen on most bottles. Your ice cream? The more realistic one cup serving would replace the current half-cup serving size.

“Things like the size of a muffin have changed so dramatically. It is important that the information on the nutrition fact labels reflect the realities in the world today,” says administration commissioner Dr. Margaret Hamburg.

The “Calories from Fat” line would be removed.

Percent daily calories would shift to the left of the label. And some package sizes would be required to show both “per serving” and “per package” calorie and nutrient amounts.

Added sugars would be highlighted on a new line. Currently, naturally occurring sugars and added sugars are lumped together. Foods with unexpected added sugars include pasta sauce, ketchup, and pizza. One cup of pasta sauce has five teaspoons of sugar while a frozen pizza may contain as much as six teaspoons. Each tablespoon of ketchup contains one teaspoon of sugar.

A revised nutrition facts label may not stop you from overeating ice cream, but at least the portion size will be easier to read and will be more realistic.

Christine Palumbo is a Naperville-registered dietitian nutritionist who is a new Fellow of the American Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics and is enthused about the proposed changes, although she wishes caffeine would also be included. Mini mushroom burgers

PREPARATION TIME: 5 minutes

MARINATE TIME: 30 minutes

COOKING TIME: 8 minutes

SERVES: 4

INGREDIENTS:

2 Portabella mushrooms, stems removed

1/4 cup light balsamic vinaigrette

Salt and freshly ground black pepper

8 small high-fiber whole-grain dinner rolls

8 slices red onion

8 slices tomato

DIRECTIONS: Place Portabellas and vinaigrette in a large zip top bag. Zip and lightly rub the vinaigrette into the mushrooms. Let marinate for at least 30 minutes. Remove mushrooms from bag, drain and season both sides with salt and pepper. Heat a grill or grill pan over medium heat and spray with non-stick cooking spray. Place the mushrooms on the grill gill side down and cook for 4 minutes. Turn and continue to grill until mushroom is almost cooked through, about 4 more minutes. Remove from pan and drain mushrooms on paper towel, gill side down. Cut each mushroom into quarters and place on buns. Top with onion and tomato and serve.

Red, white, & blue

Independence Day traditions around NYC

Independence Day in New York City and out east means lots of FabULySS fireworks, BBQs, beaches, DeLysscious picnics, and more that make this summer holiday one of my family's favorites. Not to mention my 6-year-old son's birthday is July 3, and he loves that he will always have fireworks on his birthday. We usually spend the holiday weekend at the beach. The boys love to swim, play ball, and, of course, we stay up late to watch the fireworks. This Fourth of July I am going to put my new beautiful baby girl in a red-white-and-blue bathing suit. The Fourth of July in New York City is amazing! The weather is almost always wonderful for our family celebrations.

One of our favorites of course is the Macy's Fourth of July Fireworks, which, by the way, this year makes its return to the East River and will light up the night from one of the city's most famous landmarks, the Brooklyn Bridge! Also note that you can enjoy the gorgeous fireworks over the East River with your choice of boat cruises.

If you can watch the fireworks from the water, it can be a truly amazing experience. The Circle Line Harbor Lights Cruise is a great choice, as well as City Sightseeing Independence Day Cruises. The best outdoor free spots will be: Brooklyn Bridge Park, Brooklyn Promenade and some areas of the South Street Seaport. We also love a great rooftop at a lounge, hotel, and or friend's building to watch the fireworks. If you are lucky enough to live in a building that has a rooftop, invite some friends over and throw a party. The kids will also love to help get ready for the party, and you can bake red-white-and-blue cupcakes together and make fun colorful patriotic decorations. My boys love making spangled fruit smoothies (strawberry, blueberry, cream) and patriotic pudding pops.

Macy's Fourth of July Fireworks on the East River. July 4, 9 pm. The best viewing spots will be from Brooklyn Bridge Park and the Brooklyn Heights Promenade, and along the east side of Lower Manhattan.

Now don't tell my boys that I am suggesting this (they are the biggest Mets fans), however, what better way to celebrate Independence Day than with America's favorite pastime? A ball game, with, of course, a good old-fashioned hot dog, and crack-cracks. There's a Mets vs. Rangers game at 7:10 pm.

Mets vs. Rangers at Citi Field [123-01 Roosevelt Ave. in Willets Point, Queens, (718) 507-6387, http://newyork.mets.mlb.com/ticketing/singlegame.jsp?c_id=nym&y=2014&mlbkw=ma-s-2Kv4oDqv] July 4, 7:10 pm.

Since a lot of families might be out of the city for the long weekend, it's a great time to go see a Broadway show. Perhaps get tickets to see "Aladdin," "Matilda," and or "Rocky." These are three shows that I know the entire family will enjoy (and you might be able to get excellent tickets).

One of the funniest Fourth of July traditions in New York City is the Nathan's Hot Dog Eating Contest. At this fierce Fourth of July event, 20 able-bodied competitors will fight to see who can consume the greatest number of Nathan's hot dogs in under 10 minutes. Famous world-class competitors such as Joey Chestnut and Kobayashi have ensured that this Coney Island competition will have an attendance in excess of 40,000. My boys think get a kick out of this.

Nathan's Famous Hot Dog-Eating Contest (Corner of Stillwell and Surf avenues, www.nathansfamous.com/index.php/hot-dog-eating-contest). July 4, noon.

Whatever you decide to do on this special holiday, we hope that you get to spend some extra quality family time and don't forget to power down and unplug.

Of course, make sure to take lots of photos of the beautiful fireworks and post them on Instagram. Happy family memories will be made this holiday weekend.

Sibling on the way!

Helping children embrace a new family member

BY JUDY M. MILLER

Our family building began with one child. As our family grew, I discovered that preparation helped our children transition into their new roles as a big brother or big sister. Here are a few tips from my in-the-trenches experiences, practices that helped our children embrace the newest family member with total joy:

Begin the big sibling preparation early

You will have plenty of time once you have shared the news that your are expecting. Use some of this time to help your child become comfortable with welcoming the new arrival. Siblings-to-be can sing, talk to, or tell stories to the baby in your belly. Talk about what a great older brother or sister your child will be, and what a help they can be to you.

Your child can carry a photo around of the child if you are adopting. My son did this after we received a picture of his sister from China. We laminated a copy for him so that he would not destroy it. He proudly shared the picture with anyone he could, "This is my baby sister!"

Siblings-to-be can help with nursery preparation — arranging small items like diapers, books, and stuffed animals. Older siblings can help with painting the room. Our son helped us pick out books for his sister, as well as toys and clothes. My daughter helped me put her sister's crib together by handing me the small assembly items. She then ran and got a stuffed animal from her cache to gift to her baby sister.

Acknowledge that everything shifts when a new child arrives

An only or youngest becomes a big sister or brother. The youngest child relinquishes the spot of being the baby, to become the middle child. As parents, we should recognize and talk about these changes with our children and focus on the fact that even though our family is growing it is still our family, just bigger.

Our oldest was an "only" for five years before his sister arrived home. We spent a lot of time preparing him to be a big brother. We discussed responsibilities and expectations as well as the privileges that come with being the oldest. We read books and watched movies about families with multiple kids; then we talked about the relationships we read about or viewed in the movies. The transition to becoming a big brother went beautifully because he was so invested. Now a teenager and an adult, my daughter and son continue to be close.

Be consistent

Adhere to your schedule. Children do well with consistency; they need to know what they can rely on, what to expect. Consistency gives a child security, especially when there has been a big change, as in the addition of a new sibling.

It is common for children to act out or regress when a new sibling arrives into the family. My youngest daughter wanted a bottle after her brother arrived home. Recently potty-trained, she had a few accidents.

Discipline and reactions to your children should be consistent with how you handled things prior to the arrival of your new child. Praise the behavior you want to see.

Address the fears that come with change

There will be less of you — energy, patience and time — to go around, especially during the first days, weeks, and, sometimes, months home. You will likely run into additional challenges because you are juggling more kids.

Assure your child that your relationship with and love for him will not change. Try to schedule on-on-one time to listen and share with your child. Have dad, another family member, or trusted friend watch the new sibling. Your child will feel loved, and this is the greatest gift you can give.

Advocating for yourself

A patient's journey through a frightening pregnancy

BY JENNY TORGERSON

Stephanie Arnold had always dreamed of having children. She met her husband, Jonathan, later in life and together they went through three rounds of in vitro fertilization to have their daughter Adina. When Adina was 3, they decided that they wanted to try for another child. This time, it took seven rounds of in vitro for 42-year-old Arnold to conceive. The family was overjoyed, and for the first 20 weeks of her pregnancy, everything seemed to be perfect.

The family was splitting time between Chicago and New York City because of work commitments, so Arnold had a dedicated ob-gyn in each city. At 20 weeks into her pregnancy, both doctors confirmed a diagnosis of placenta previa, a condition in which the placenta is located on top of the cervix. Her doctors assured her that this was perfectly normal, and as long as she refrained from lifting and exercise, she would be able to carry the baby to term.

Two weeks later, Arnold was convinced that would never happen. She began to have severe premonitions of her death.

"I could visualize my husband burying me, putting dirt on my casket," she says. She repeatedly dreamed that she would need a hysterectomy and would hemorrhage to death.

"My dreams were so vivid, and so detailed," says Arnold.

She was compelled to seek answers. Together, she and her husband went to visit a specialist at Northwestern University in Illinois. She was convinced that she needed a hysterectomy; the doctor asked if she had "been on the internet a little too much."

"Everyone thought I was crazy. No one believed me," remembers Arnold. However, as her premonitions grew stronger, she became more convinced that she was right.

An MRI at 32 weeks of pregnancy revealed nothing abnormal. Rather than relieving her anxiety, this only increased Arnold's fears, because she had no tangible cause for what could be wrong. By that point, she had been told by doctors that she could no longer fly until after her delivery, so she knew she would be having the baby in Chicago. She went for a special appointment with an anesthesiologist. By this point, she had experienced six total premonitions, including one that convinced her that she would need general anesthesia.

The meeting with the anesthesiologist went well, and although she did not know it at the time, the anesthesiologist flagged her file, and made a plan to incorporate extra crash carts and blood monitors into her delivery. This measure would eventually save Arnold's life.

At home, Arnold began to write goodbye letters to her children and husband, and even mailed a goodbye letter to the embryologist who had helped her to conceive. She also posted on Facebook, requesting that friends who share her blood type, O-negative, donate so that she would have a supply on hand for her delivery.

On May 30, 2013, at 36 weeks of pregnancy, as she was feeding her daughter breakfast, she started to bleed all over the kitchen floor. She put her daughter into her car seat and drove straight to the hospital. As she kissed her daughter goodbye before being wheeled into labor and delivery, Arnold was convinced that "this was the last time [she] was going to see her."

Arnold remembers that she "just felt like a ticking time bomb." She grabbed the doctor's hand and begged her to realize that there was "something wrong." The doctor assured her that she would be fine, and as Arnold was wheeled into the operating room for a C-section, she made the conscious decision to "let go."

"I just felt like I had said something over and over and it was out of my hands," recalls Arnold. The last thing she remembers is soap being put on her stomach prior to the start of her C-section.

She woke up in the Intensive Care Unit six days later. Arnold suffered an Amniotic Fluid Embolism, which has a less than 15 percent survival rate. She was clinically dead for 37 seconds before doctors were able to revive her. The condition is so rare that none of the doctors on her team had ever experienced one in their careers. Unbeknownst to Arnold, her doctors had attended a conference where they had learned a life-saving method to handle the condition. This training, coupled with the measures taken by her anesthesiologist, saved her life. When her doctors had the hemorrhage under control, they transferred her to the ICU in a medically induced coma.

While in the ICU, Arnold had to have a hysterectomy due to the marriage of her placenta and uterus. She had three surgeries within 36 hours of being admitted to the hospital. During that time, she had more than 60 units of blood transfused into her body — more than three times the normal blood supply.

When Arnold came out of the coma, she could not sit up, could not eat, and required dialysis to repair damage to her kidneys. After six weeks, she was finally able to come off the medication and machines. She is the first recorded case of someone who suffered an Amniotic Fluid Embolism and survived, without any neurological damage.

"I felt something, and I said something," says Arnold. Thanks to her persistence, doctors were able to prepare for the care that she would ultimately need to save her life. At first no one believed her, but Arnold was relentless in her quest to be heard.

"If doctors don't believe you, you need to speak up louder," she says.

Today, Arnold's son, Jacob, is 10 months old. She is off all medications and she is unable to carry him — she is still rebuilding her muscle strength. She still has one more surgery pending to remove scar tissue to alleviate a resulting hernia. But this time, she has not had any premonitions. Her surgical team will be the same team that delivered Jacob.

"I just feel the normal fear anyone has before surgery," says Arnold. But, if that feeling were to change, she would not hesitate to advocate for herself.

"Patients need to speak up for themselves," advises Arnold, "you need to listen to your own body."

This is the message that she hopes others will take away from her experience.

Five city kids win big in bookmaking competition

BY SHEREE WICHARD

Brooklyn and Manhattan students took home the top awards at the Ezra Jack Keats Foundation's annual Bookmaking Competition for grades third through 12.

Citywide and borough-winning books, honorable mentions, and all school-wide winning books were on exhibit at the Brooklyn Public Library Central Library (at Grand Army Plaza) in May. The citywide and borough winners and honorable mention recipients were given medals at an awards ceremony at the library. In addition, the citywide winners received $500 and the borough winners $100 from the Foundation.

The competition is divided into three categories: elementary (grades three through five), middle (grades sixth through eighth) and high school (grades nine to 12). This includes elementary, middle and high school winners from District 75.

Citywide elementary winner:

"Journey to the Stars," by Gianluca Pellegrini, illustrated by Ping Wen Lin (fifth grade at PS-IS 229, the Dyker School in Brooklyn).

The students were inspired by a story they saw about Voyager I.

"One day, Ping Wen and I were reading the New York Times and saw a story about Voyager I. That's how we came up with the idea for 'Journey to the Stars,'" explains Gianluca. "It was really fun trying to find words that were descriptive and interesting and would work with Ping Wen's illustrations. My teacher helped me fix any writing mistakes, which is okay because everyone makes mistakes!"

Ping Wen explained that in their creative process, the illustrations came first.

"The illustrations for our book came before the story. I decided to draw Voyager I with a smile — I thought he'd be a happy spaceship because he was leaving the solar system. I used paint, special papers that my teacher got for me and pencils to do the drawings in the book. Voyager I had so many parts to his body that I'd have to say he was the most challenging part to make. It was fun working with a friend."

Citywide middle school winner:

"New York City," written and illustrated by Alex Trinidad and Brian Tzic (Grade eight at PS 77K in District 75, Brooklyn).

The co-winner of this transportation story had a creative take on New York Harbor.

"One of my favorite pages to draw was the Staten Island Ferry with sharks in the water!" says Alex. "I also liked using printmaking. First, we picked a color of ink. Second, we rolled the ink onto the foam plate. Then, we printed the foam plate onto the book page. I am really proud of the book we made together."

Brian spoke about the fun they had learning about new mediums in art class.

"New York City is the first book I ever made!" he says. "Our art teacher, Ms. Amie, showed us many different kinds of books. I liked the accordion book best because it showed all the pages at once. To make the accordion, we had to fold the pages and glue them together. We drew on Styrofoam plates instead of paper because you can print your drawings in many different colors. It was fun working on the book with Alex. I am really good at drawing trains and buses and he is good at drawing boats and cars."

Citywide high school winner:

"In Praise of Plants: Part V," illustrated by Aleksandra Stanisavljevic (Grade 12 at Stuyvesant High School, Manhattan).

The winner was inspired to interpret a poem she found.

"In Praise of Plants: Part V" is an excerpt from a poem by the noted Serbian poet Branko Miljkovic — I discovered an English translation of it on a field trip that my poetry class took to a Poetry Center," says Aleksandra. "I was moved by the images and colorful descriptions. I decided to interpret the poem artistically, which resulted in many elaborate pop-ups that I created, painstakingly, with an X-acto knife and mixed media. But the effort was worth it!"

Schools Chancellor Carmen Farina praised the program.

"Getting kids excited about reading and writing is critical for their long-term academic success. And I want to congratulate all of the talented student bookmakers who have shown that they understand and appreciate the link between narrative and image," she said. "We know that teachers are the keys to our students' success, and I thank all of the teachers and librarians who have supported these young authors and illustrators. And I also want to thank the Ezra Jack Keats Foundation for creating and supporting this program for almost 30 years."

The annual Bookmaking Competition begins each fall. Public school students are invited to come up with an intriguing theme, create engaging text, and integrate illustrations using a range of media. Expressive writing and artwork are strongly encouraged.

The process is integrated into classroom instruction with a strong emphasis on the study of picture books. Student books are created under the supervision of a teacher or librarian.

A need for flexibility

Comptroller
Scott Stringer wants to give city employees more options in working hours

BY SHNIEKA L. JOHNSON

City Comptroller Scott Stringer is proposing legislation to set the stage for flexible workplace hours for city employees — a topic very personal to him as a parent of two small children.

The legislation, “Right to Request,” aims to decrease the level of fear that employees may have in requesting flexible working arrangements by creating a platform for employees to approach their employers. Stringer announced findings from a report issued by his office joined by his wife Elyse Buxbaum and their two children.

A similar bill has been proposed at the federal level (called the Flexibility for Working Families Act), and model legislation is currently under consideration at the state level. These laws do not mandate that employers provide flexible scheduling, but they promote dialogue that can help eliminate the stigma associated with non-traditional work arrangements.

Stringer’s report, entitled “Families and Flexibility: Reshaping the Workplace for the 21st Century,” provides examples of best practices for companies to offer flexible scheduling to their employees and the variety of cost savings and other benefits that this scheduling can have for businesses. Advocates of the proposed legislation say that there is a need for “right to request” legislation because a change in hours can help a family, especially working families, single parents, and those caring for elderly relatives. The report is a strong attempt to bring everyone (legislators, business owners and employees) to the table to discuss this topic and find ways to implement flexible scheduling.

Following Stringer’s presentation, I discussed this topic with him further:

Shnieka Johnson: Your family was present at your most recent press conference on the “Right to Request” legislation. Are they what made you feel so strongly about this topic of workplace flexibility?

Scott Stringer: Yes, it’s a struggle my wife and I confront every day as the parents of two children under 3 with full time jobs. It is my duty to look out for the long-term interest of our city’s economy. Few issues have a more profound effect on the day-to-day lives of working people like us in our city and beyond than achieving what is popularly known as “work-life balance.”

SJ: There is a passionate group of supporters behind the legislation, but what obstacles do you foresee in implementing it?

SS: One of the greatest obstacles to flexible workplaces is the continued stigma associated with taking time from work to care for family members. That stigma won’t go away overnight — not after generations have become accustomed to the traditional 9-to-5 workday within the walls of a particular workstation.

However, the best way to chip away at that old philosophy and make employees expect and employers embrace flexible scheduling is to provide a safe space to start a conversation about how it can be a benefit to both workers and the bottom line.

We will look carefully at successful legislation overseas and in states across the country for best practices in how to effectively implement “right-to-request,” and I am confident that our city agencies, many of whom are well-versed in enforcement of employment laws, are up to the challenge.

I have a strong coalition in support of the legislation. At my press conference, I was joined by caregiver groups like AARP and the Alzheimer’s Association, women’s advocates like NARAL Prochoice NY and Catalyst, and groups that advocate for low-wage workers like the Center for Popular Democracy and the Retail Action Project.

SJ: Are there strategies in place to maintain momentum on this topic and continue the conversation?

SS: I plan to host a forum on this topic to engage with the business community and workers in all sectors. Many in the private

City Comptroller Scott Stringer spoke of his workplace flexibility legislation at City Hall.

“Few issues have a more profound effect on the day-to-day lives of working people like us in our city and beyond than achieving what is popularly known as ‘work-life balance.’” sector have already realized that flexible workplace scheduling is profitable for all participants, but government can do more. I have strong legislative partners at the city, state, and federal level and there will be hearings on the bills.

SJ: Technology and telecommuting was mentioned a number of times during your remarks. Is that where you see the trends of workplace flexibility going?

SS: We’ve seen how technology can revolutionize our daily lives — from smartphones to GPS. But all too often, our institutions — business and government — are slow to pick up on what consumers already understand, namely, that technology can revolutionize the workplace and make the world more efficient.

Telecommuting certainly isn’t going to work for all businesses. After all, you can’t knead pizza dough on the internet or fit someone for a pair of shoes remotely. But for many businesses, technology will be one piece of a broader conversation about how flexibility works for their company and industry.

Aetna, one of America’s largest health insurers, increased its share of workers who telecommute — from nine percent in 2005 to 47 percent in 2012, saving the company $78 million in real estate costs alone.

SJ: How will this help working families with small children specifically?

SS: Flexible workplace arrangements allow parents and their employers to accommodate their schedules — that so often involve juggling many activities: day care, school drop-offs, doctor’s appointments, soccer practice, and many, many others. Sometimes adjusting your schedule by even one hour can make all the difference and have a positive impact on your work product

SJ: The benefits to the employees are clear, how does this legislation positively affect the businesses that are on board?

SS: For New York City to remain an economic engine, we must compete with other cities for top talent and investment. To do that, we must realize that everyone benefits from a policy that sees family and work as complementary, rather than competing parts of life. Happy, productive employees are good for business.

SJ: In the long-term, how will New York City benefit financially from “Right to Request?”

SS: This is an issue of economic competitiveness for the future of the city’s economy. By embracing flexible scheduling, it will help to keep employees who are also parents or caregivers in New York City and attract young people who see the city not only as a place where they can make their mark professionally, but also as a place where they can put down roots and raise a family.

SJ: What would you like to communicate to New York City parents about this proposed legislation?

SS: I am highlighting the value of this important policy change, and hoping to start a discussion about it in New York City. I want parents to know that I understand the challenges of balancing their family responsibilities and career. The pressure of caring for children and elderly parents is very real. I feel it every day. In the New York City Comptroller’s Office, we have our finger on the pulse of the New York City economy. That means responding to the needs of the business community, but also taking concrete steps to address the real challenges facing working people in all five boroughs. Promoting flexible work arrangements is but one piece of that effort, and I look forward to continuing this conversation in the months and years to come.

ASK AN ATTORNEY

ALISON ARDEN BESUNDER, ESQ.

The inherited IRA

I inherited an Individual Retirement Account from my aunt. I am 45 years old, and there is $350,000 in the account. What are the rules, and is that money exposed to creditors if I am sued or file for bankruptcy?

Both Roth IRAs and traditional IRAs are enjoying 15-minutes of fame this month in the wake of a United States Supreme Court's decision in the Clark vs. Rameker case on June 12, 2014. The Court was presented with the question: "Is an inherited IRA protected from the bankruptcy claims of creditors?" On June 12 the Court answered that question with a unanimous "No."

Specifically, the Court held that funds held in inherited IRAs are not "retirement funds" within the meaning of U.S.C. § 522(b)(3)(c) and therefore are not exempt from the bankruptcy estate. This renders inherited IRA funds to creditor claims in bankruptcy. Traditional and Roth IRAs have typically been exempt from bankruptcy claims up to a $1 million limit ($1,245,475 as adjusted for inflation in 2014).

The United States Circuit Courts of Appeals (the third court to address a bankruptcy case if it is appealed) has taken opposing views on this question. In the Eighth Circuit, inherited IRAs have been exempt from bankruptcy claims on the grounds that the funds are retirement funds in tax-exempt vehicles. Other Circuits have held that inherited IRAs lack the requisite "retirement purpose" and are governed by a different set of rules than IRAs in the hands of their original owners. Inherited IRAs can be liquidated at any time without penalty, unlike an original IRA, which suffers a penalty if the owner withdraws assets before the age of 59-and-a-half.

In the Clark case, Heidi Heffron-Clark inherited an IRA from her mother in 2001, who had named Heidi on the beneficiary designation form. The IRA was worth $450,000 at the mother's death. Heidi had drawn the account down to approximately $300,000 before filing for Chapter 7 bankruptcy nine years later in October, 2010. Heidi argued that the money constituted "retirement funds" and was not available to creditors. The creditors objected. The bankruptcy court agreed. The U.S. District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin reversed the bankruptcy court and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit overturned the District Court decision.

IRA accounts, employer sponsored retirement plans such as 401(k)s and 403(b)s are accounts that an individual creates and funds for himself. The Supreme Court decision turned on the legal distinction between self-funded IRAs and inherited IRAs, whether through an employer-sponsored plan or a roll-over when you leave the company. The Court noted that, unlike IRA owners, inheritors cannot make additional contributions to the account. They can withdraw funds without penalty. By contrast, non-spouse inheritors of an IRA must withdraw the entire account balance in five years of the primary owner's death or take out a minimum amount each year starting on Dec. 31 of the year after the IRA owner dies. This applies to all inherited IRAs. The Court emphasized this distinction, reasoning that the bankruptcy code provision is intended to ensure that a filer has money during retirement, justifying its protection.

This presents an interesting conundrum for spouses who inherit an IRA. Spousal inherited IRAs receive slightly different treatment. An inheritor spouse can roll over the inherited IRA into her own IRA account and not take distributions until she reaches 70-and-a-half, even if that date is later than the date the decedent spouse would have turned 70-and-a-half. She would not be able to withdraw assets before the age of 59-and-a-half from the commingled IRA. If she elects the roll-over, her own account is not an inherited IRA. If she does not do the roll-over, the inherited IRA is considered such. The spouse in that scenario would not have to withdraw money until the decedent spouse would have turned 70-and-a-half (or immediately assuming the spouse died after he reached that age). Since now, under the Court's decision, the inherited IRA would not be protected from bankruptcy, this new interpretation militates in favor of spouses rolling over the IRA into their own (or opening one post-haste if they did not have one to begin with).

Naming a creditor-protection trust as a beneficiary is also an option for spouse and non-spouse inheritors alike. The trust will shield the inherited IRA funds from creditors, and can also control a (possibly spend-thrift) heir to withdraw the funds in terms of timing and amount. The rules applicable to setting up a trust that will be the recipient of an inherited IRA are complex, and should only be implemented with the assistance of a qualified estate attorney to ensure that your objectives are met and that you understand all the benefits and drawbacks of using a trust.

Seven ways
moms in the 'sandwich generation' can reduce stress of caregiving

BY ALEXA BIGWARFE

Mothers in the “sandwich generation” (between the ages of 35 and 54 who are simultaneously caring for children and aging parents), feel more stress than any other age group, according to the American Psychological Association. This stress impacts all aspects of their lives — relationships with their spouse and children, emotional well-being, and their health.

Caring for children is stressful on its own, but caring for a parent at the same time can cause caregivers to become overly stressed and even depressed.

The stress of dual caregiving is caused by numerous factors: increased financial burden, feeling as though they are torn between caring for their children and their parent, and managing all the extra duties that come along with caring for a parent. Mothers who are “sandwiched” between parents and children often take on the bulk of the caregiving responsibilities. A 2008 study of social workers reported that the majority of mothers in the sandwich generation are not prepared for all of the responsibilities that accompany caring for children and an elderly family member simultaneously. Additionally, many of those mothers were also unaware of the resources that are available to help them with their daily caregiving roles.

You are not alone if you've found yourself exhausted from being “sandwiched.” Here are some ways to help you reduce the stress associated with the demands of being a caregiver:

Breathe. Take time to relax and take a step back. If you have to, schedule daily and weekly down time. Determine what priorities really need to be handled, and let some of the other stuff go.

Get physical. A regular exercise routine can really help reduce stress.

Say “yes” to help, and don't forget to ask for it! If you have siblings, be sure to include them and have them help. You can also reach out to church members, friends, and social workers.

Develop a care plan. Include your parent or elderly family member, and ensure you understand her care goals and priorities. Also, involve the children in the planning process and allow their input, particularly if they will be sacrificing time, activities, and space due to your caregiving responsibilities.

Identify outside resources to help. Contact your local Area Agency on Aging for information on local caregiving services. Outside resources can really help alleviate stress. Available services usually include home health, laundry services, food preparation and delivery, driving services, and more.

If resources allow, consider retaining an elder care attorney. These attorneys are very familiar with the laws, rights, benefits, and all things related to protecting the elderly. They can be a tremendous support and wealth of information and also very useful in helping to prepare for end of life care and considerations.

Guard your relationships with your spouse and children. This is important. Family relationships can really suffer when children and spouses feel they are being ignored. Moms can also become overwhelmed with guilt from being torn away from their family in order to care for their parents. Be sure to make special time for your family and schedule periodic date nights with your spouse.

The sandwich generation phenomenon is not likely to end any time soon, especially since many children are living with their parents longer, women are waiting until later in life to have children, and life expectancies are longer. It is important for moms in this role to know how to get help and how to cope before becoming overwhelmed.

Alexa Bigwarfe is the mother of three small children. She has taken a special interest in child, maternal, and newborn health and writes regularly on these topics.

Take it to the BANK

Should you bank your baby's cord blood?

BY SANDRA GORDON

Five days before her first birthday, Peyton Connelly had been crankier and sleepier than usual. When her mom, Shelly, went to retrieve her from her crib after a lengthy nap, "Peyton stood up and fell over," Shelly says.

Alarmed, Shelly and her husband, Travis, 32, took their toddler to the local hospital. There, they were shocked to learn that Peyton had a malignant brain tumor.

"Fortunately, it was surrounded by benign tumor," says the 33-year-old mom of two. Surgery to remove the mass was all that was required and after a two-week hospital stay, little Peyton went home.

No sooner did the Connelys pull into their driveway, however, did Shelly notice Peyton twitching, soon limp as a rag doll. Shelly and Travis rushed Peyton back to the hospital, where tests revealed a major setback: The 1 year old had suffered a massive stroke. She could barely lift her head and had lost use of the right side of her body.

"It was as if it wasn't there," Shelly says. Gone were Peyton's budding verbal skills, too. The Connelys were told that intense physical, speech, and occupational therapy were all that could be done. Yet, progress was slow and frustrating.

Then, one day, "a light bulb went off," says Shelly, as she was reading a magazine article about stem cells while waiting for Peyton to undergo an MRI at the hospital. Ah ha!

"We had banked Peyton's cord blood. We had options," she says. Indeed, Shelly and Travis had stored Peyton's umbilical cord blood at birth through Cord Blood Registry, the world's largest newborn stem cell company.

A healing natural resource

Cord blood is a type of blood in a baby's umbilical cord that's rich in powerful blood-forming stem cells known as hematopoietic progenitor cells (these cells aren't embryonic stem cells). Hematopoietic progenitor cells — also found in bone marrow — are capable of renewing themselves and forming into more specialized cells.

"These master cells can differentiate and become different kinds of tissue in the body, to restore function," says Dr. Rallie McAllister, the co-author of "The Mommy MD Guide to Pregnancy and Birth."

After a baby is born, the umbilical cord and placenta are usually discarded. By collecting and freezing this blood instead, however, hematopoietic progenitor cells can be stored and used by someone who needs them — either the child from which the stem cells were derived, a family member, or even a stranger, through public cord blood donation. A cord blood transplant replaces diseased blood-forming cells with healthy ones, which can travel to wherever in the body they're needed. Hematopoietic progenitor cells reduce inflammation, stimulate blood flow and the growth of new blood vessels, and encourage and promote healing. Patients with leukemia, lymphoma, or certain inherited metabolic or immune system disorders have diseased blood-forming cells.

Blood banking basics

If you're interested in banking your baby's cord blood, you can store the blood privately so it's available for your baby or another family member to use, or donate it to a public cord blood bank at no charge, where it can be used to treat people with life-threatening illnesses. Either way, put cord blood banking in your birth plan, then inform your obstetrician or midwife and the hospital or birthing facility of your intentions.

Private banking is an investment. There's an average one-time fee of $2,000 and a yearly storage fee of around $130. The cost can be a financial burden for a couple just starting out. To offset the expense, "put cord blood banking on your baby registry,"

Dr. McAllister says.

Cord blood banks must store cord blood under pristine conditions. There are 29 AABB (formerly known as the American Association of Blood Banks) accredited private cord blood banks in the U.S. AABB maintains standards for cellular therapy services to which accredited banks must adhere.

Cord Blood Registry's laboratory and storage facility in Tucson, Arizona, for example, is fortified with bullet-resistant glass, has one of the largest backup generators available, and monitors temperature every 1.6 seconds. For a complete list of AABB accredited private cord blood banks, visit www.aabb.org/sa/facilities/celltherapy/Pages/CordBloodAccrfac.aspx. Cord blood can be stored indefinitely.

If you decide to bank your baby's cord blood privately, contact the storage facility you select several months before your baby is born. You'll be sent a collection kit that contains two vials. Give the kit to your obstetrician when you're in labor. Once the vials are filled, they'll be shipped or taken by courier to the facility, where the cord blood is documented and placed into storage within 24 hours. If you choose to donate your baby's cord blood, ask your obstetrician or midwife how to go about it at the hospital or birthing center where you'll be delivering.

"If you do nothing else, at least educate yourself about cord blood banking," Dr. McAllister says. For more information, start by visiting the Food and Drug Administration at www.fda.gov/biologics-bloodvaccines/resourcesforyou/consumers/ucm236044.htm.

when your baby is born and the umbilical cord is clamped. Cord blood banking is painless to you and your baby and not dangerous in anyway. It's safe and easy for obstetrician or midwife to do, whether you deliver vaginally or by cesarean section. Still, only 10 percent of cord blood is banked.

"Ninety percent of cord blood goes in the hospital incinerator," Dr. McAllister says. "It's a travesty."

Fortunately, the Connelys had the foresight to bank Peyton's cord blood.

"My father-in-law had remarried and his wife was pregnant at the same time I was," Shelly says. "Since he was banking his baby's blood, he offered to cover the cost of privately banking my baby's cord blood, too." (For more information about cost, see "Banking Basics.")

"But I wasn't thinking about brain tumors or stroke. It was like, sure, why not?" Shelly says. "Then, I had a 'what if' situation."

In the aftermath of Peyton's stroke, the Connelys researched their options and traveled to the Duke Stem Cell and Regenerative Medicine Program in North Carolina, where Peyton's stem cells were shipped. There, Peyton listened to a musician strum his guitar as her own stem cells flowed through an IV into her blood stream. The October 2009 procedure took about 20 minutes. It was that simple. Just weeks after the $18,000 cord blood transplant, which was covered by health insurance, Peyton began to regain the use of the right side of her body.

Today, five years since Peyton's stroke, the kindergartener loves to sing and dance. She's on track both in the classroom and on the playground.

"Her speech has taken off. She no longer needs speech therapy," Shelly says. Although gripping with her right hand remains a challenge, Peyton continues to improve through occupational and physical therapy. She can open her right hand and use her left hand to close it around her bicycle handle, for example.

"It's phenomenal what cord blood banking can achieve," Shelly says. "We're so excited about what the future holds for Peyton."

Sandra Gordon is an award-winning freelance writer who delivers expert advice and the latest developments in health, nutrition, parenting, and consumer issues. Her most recent book is "Save a Bundle: 50+ Ways to Save Big on Baby Gear."

For some of these patients, an umbilical cord blood or a bone marrow transplant may be their best treatment option, according to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Over the last two decades, hematopoietic progenitor stem cells derived from cord blood have been used in more than 30,000 transplants performed worldwide to treat more than 80 diseases and disorders in adults and children. It's a burgeoning area of medicine called regenerative medicine — the science of using the body's own cells to induce healing and help repair damaged tissues and organs.

"Cord blood is one of the most valuable resources we have in medicine today," Dr. McAllister says.

Once-in-a-lifetime opportunity

The decision to bank your baby's cord blood is critical because you've only got one opportunity to do it —

Music & Mandarin

The perfect combination

BY LAURA LEE

Have you ever heard a child rattling off a list of vocabulary words? Probably not. On the other hand, have you ever heard a child singing a song? Most definitely — a resounding, “Yes!”

From the very beginning, we teach children their ABCs through a song.

Facts about music

- All children are musical when they are born — they can keep a steady beat and sing in tune. Their future musical ability depends on how and if you nurture it.

- Music develops a child holistically on all levels: social, cognitive, emotional, physical, musical, and with language development.

- Between the ages of newborn to 7, children experience rapid brain development. This is a prime time to expose them to many different types of music and movement vocabulary.

- The parent or primary caregiver is the most important teacher for one's child. Babies' brains develop based on three components: genetics, experience, and environment. When babies are given a safe experience within a loving environment, they learn better.

Facts about Mandarin Chinese

- Mandarin is one of the six United Nations languages and is spoken by more than one billion people in the world, more than any other language.

- Mandarin is the standard language of China, the world's second-largest economy.

- Between the ages of newborn to 7, children experience rapid brain development. This is a prime time to expose them to a new language.

- Children who learn a language before adolescence are more likely to develop native-like pronunciation.

We speak rhymes and sing lullabies in our everyday rhythm. So why do language programs approach the task of learning a new language with the use of dry, repeated vocabulary lists?

Through research-based studies, an extensive music background, and professional, firsthand, early childhood development music teaching coupled with personal experience raising a bilingual child, I understand how music truly helps a child learn language.

My 3-year-old daughter is bilingual in English and Mandarin Chinese, completely at ease in either setting of native speakers. She switches effortlessly between the two languages, oftentimes translating for those who don't understand the other language.

It is amazing to see how her brain dives immediately from one language to the other, obvious that the synapses in her brain have direct links to each language, rather than having to travel through one language to access the other. The brain undergoes amazing, rapid development between the ages of newborn and age 7, a prime time to expose one's child to a new language.

I decided the moment that our daughter was born that I would speak only Mandarin with her and that my husband (who does not speak Chinese) would speak only English with her. I understood how important it would be for her to be bilingual in our global society.

It definitely took strict dedication on my part to speak only Mandarin with our daughter since I speak only English with my husband. Even though he does not speak Chinese, he had to be 100 percent supportive of what we had chosen since he would not understand what we were conversing about on a daily basis. Not only is he fully supportive, but also since our daughter's familiarity with Mandarin has soared, he has been inspired to start learning Mandarin as well.

We followed the One Parent-One Language method (one parent speaks one language and the other parent speaks another), and it certainly works as I can testify from firsthand experience! It has been a wonderful experience to develop a strong relationship with our daughter in Mandarin. With the birth of our second child, it has been magical to see our daughter and son begin to develop strong sibling ties in Mandarin as well.

We sing songs daily — it's a natural part of everything we do. Built into our everyday rhythms, music is like another language. It doesn't take effort — it's fun. We sing songs when washing our hands, taking a stroll with a steady beat, saying “Hello” to all our stuffed animals, and cleaning up. My daughter can accurately match pitch and makes up tunes all the time, adding her own words or silly sounds. Is this exceptionally unique? Not at all. All children are musical. They respond receptively to music and movement. Why? It's simple: music activates many parts of the brain. When language information is condensed into a compact unit, such as a song, the brain is able to receive more, and as a result, process more. I say, “Sing songs — learn Chinese!”

An educator, author, and mother, Laura Lee is an expert in early childhood development. She has a double degree in music and molecular cell biology from UC Berkeley. As an educator, she has been teaching music to children since 2003 and runs a piano studio. She is the author of the award-winning children's book “Little Laura and the Birthday Surprise,” a bilingual English and Mandarin musical storybook series. Lee can be reached at littlelauramusic@gmail.com.

New & Noteworthy

BY LISA J. CURTIS

Not too cool for drool

Part scarf-bandana and part bib, the Scabib is a stylish alternative to bibs of yore that don't match baby's outfit du jour. Scabibs come in a variety of prints and colors for girls or boys, yet they are all one size, at 18-inches wide by 8-inches high. Scabibs have a Velcro-closure and absorbent, terry-cloth lining. An ideal accessory for teething babies (who drool constantly), or for a babe who's in dire need of a jaunty scarf to spice up an otherwise ho-hum ensemble. With a Scabib, baby is ready for the runway — if only she could walk.

Scabib, $12.50-$15, www.scabib.com.

Customize their ride

Britax's new Affinity stroller has a sleek frame (available in black, silver, or white), machine-washable seat liner, rain cover, and sun cover so kids ranging from six-months to 55 pounds can go for a ride in style. The clever design allows the seat to be forward- or rear-facing and has four recline positions for maximum comfort (and nap time!). With the addition of a Britax Bassinet, the Affinity stroller can accommodate newborns, allowing mother to look terribly British pushing her contemporary pram. Personalize this stroller — or make it feel new again for a second child — with one of the Color Packs, sold separately, which include a canopy, shoulder and buckle pads for the five-point safety harness, basket liner, and machine-washable padded seat liner in black, red pepper, fossil brown, sky blue, cactus green, or cool berry. Air-filled tires and an articulating handle round out this perfect combination of form and function that will have you walking and shedding that baby weight in no time.

Britax Affinity Stroller, $599.99, Color Pack, $99.99, and Bassinet $199.99, www.britax.com.

Dreamy new lullabies

Every parent whose brain is addled by sleep-deprivation will be forever grateful for "Precious Child — Love Songs & Lullabies" for speeding their babes off to the Land of Nod. Darryl Tookes and Joe Beck's utterly soothing assortment of traditional children's songs ("Twinkle Twinkle Little Star") and new works showcase Tookes' Johnny Mathis-esque baritone voice. Legendary guitarist-composer Beck and vocalist-composer-pianist Tookes drew on the love they have for their kids and paired it with their shared musical virtuosity to create an album that will restore peace and harmony to moonlight-filled nurseries everywhere, beginning Aug. 15. It's a perfect baby shower gift, but we recommend this charming album for insomniacs of all ages.

Precious Child — Love Songs & Lullabies CD by Darryl Tookes and Joe Beck, $12.98, myiesstore.com/mckennagrouponlinestore.

Sock it to 'em

Sometimes baby doesn't feel fully dressed without a pair of shoes. Trumpette has the answer for your little Peanut: a set of six socks that'll fool the eye into thinking she's wearing a pair of Lucy-inspired oxfords. Knit from a cotton-nylon-spandex blend of yarn, the socks form a cuff on top. The set of Lucy socks, which fits babes ages 0 to 12 months, is packaged in a gift box so cute that it could even make Charlie Brown smile.

Peanuts Lucy Sock Set by Trumpette, $14.50, www.trumpette.com/socks/peanuts_lucy_0-12-m.html

Just plane fun

Kadie Flye is the mother of the Flye Baby, an invention that will revolutionize airplane travel for families. She wanted to invent a device to alleviate the strain of traveling by plane with a baby on your lap. The result is the Flye Baby, a clever bed-seat that holds a baby up to 25 pounds. It allows face-to-face interaction with Mom or Dad, while the parent's hands are free to play, feed, or even do a super fast diaper change. The hammock is secured on one end by the tray table in front of the parent, and on the other end, straps around the parent's waist. The baby is attached in a five-point harness. The Flye Baby Infant Travel Seat can only be used during cruising, not during take-off or landing, and can be compactly folded, stored, and carried in its own pouch. Now, when you're choosing your family's next vacation destination, the sky's the limit.

Flye Baby Infant Travel Seat by SCS Direct, $49.95, www.thegrommet.com.
